

Seminar: Europe in the World

Given by Stephanie Hofmann

Thursday, 15:00-17:00

In this seminar, we will address broad topics such as international order-making, status, international hierarchies, and Europe's role therein from an interdisciplinary angle. We will tackle these topics through invited guest speakers, who will present their cutting-edge work-in-progress. Some of the confirmed guest speakers are Inken von Borzyskowski (Oxford University), Seo-Hyun Park (Lafayette College), Sebastian Schmidt (John Hopkins University), Patricia Spyer (Geneva Graduate Institute), and Stefanie Walter (University of Zurich). Each seminar will start with a 30-minute discussion among seminar participants and the seminar instructor where we will situate the guest speaker's scholarship, before we invite the guest speaker to the 1,5-hour presentation and Q&A. Each seminar participant will at least once take on the role of discussant and "resident expert". The main goals of the seminar are to (1) familiarize researchers with leading scholars in their discipline, (2) discuss the ropes of how to present and (3) discuss academic work constructively and learn about the substantive research areas.
